"THE WOLF AND THE KID" --by Paul Terry.

DFC -6 1921 ✓

The fable tells the story of the bandit wolf who was absolutely unscrupulous when it came to satisfying his appetite. On one particular day when the wolf was exceedingly hungry, it happened that Miss Goat pushed a baby carriage with her charge, the kid, through the park. She soon encountered her suitor, Officer Dog, and a mild flirtation started, while the wolf lurked nearby and licked his chops as he looked at the kid. Finally the kid begged to be allowed to romp on the greensward, and also begged Officer Dog to loan him his police whistle to play with. While the flirtatious nurse became more enamored the kid strayed away, followed by the wolf. As soon as Bandit Wolf saw that he was out of sight of the officer, he sprang upon the kid. The kid, however, begged that the wolf permit him freedom for a moment to dance, also requesting that the wolf play a tune upon the whistle as an accompaniment. The wolf granted the request and started blowing the whistle, which Officer Dog heard and quickly came to the rescue, overcoming the wolf.
